SUFFRAGISTS AFTER LAUREL HIGH SCHOOL "JIM" MANN'S SCALP TO HEAR LINTHICUM RAILWAY COMMON

Anent Pageant Result in Widespread Opposition.

Minority Leader "Jim" Mann, head of the Republican membership of the in stirring up trouble for himself when, about the close of the session of the recent Congress, he reflected on the suffragists who marrhed in the parade of March 3 and voiced the opinion they ought to have been at home looking after their household duties instead of indulging in a procession on Pennsylvania

Of course, Congressman Mann has ly at home in a scrap. Still, he has April 1 stirred up one of a new sort, with which he, experienced tactician and strategist that he is, doesn't know quite how to

Mr. Mann will doubtless be re-chosen for minority leader. But before he shied an unfortunate remark in the direction of the suffragists he had opposition. Now he has more of it. And the suffragists are writing their Republican friends demanding the Mann scalp and otherwise causing worry for the Chicago statesman.

Troubles in Plenty.

The Republicans in the House had troubles in plenty before the suffragists camped on their trail and threatened them if they put Mann again at their head and hence the situation gives them some anxiety. Suffrage States are getting sufficiently numerous now so that no well-alvised politician makes any mere gratuitous reflection on woman suffrage or anything pertaining thereto if he can just as well avoid it. Under the surface there is a lot of Republican talk adverse to Mann, which has been accentuated by his observations anent the suffrage parade. It will probably not come to anything. It looks as if it would be impossible for the Mann opposition to crystallize on any other individual for leader. Esch of Wisconsin is talked of, Gardner of Massachusetts, and two or three others have been considered. The outcome will probably be the selection of Mann for minority leader, and things will run on about as before in the Republican camp in the House.

May Limit Power.

Considerable talk is heard, however, of clipping the wings of the minority Means Committee the Committee on Committees is discussed. This would make the minority leader a much less powerful personage than he is now. In fact, there is as much reason for depriving the minority leader of the power to fill committee places as there was to describe the Damen Verein of the society.

wise. There are those who assert that if Mann continues two more years to Annapolis Cadets To Be be Republican leader, the powers of the Republican members to make motions and speak speeches will atrophy. Many and speak speeches will acrophy. Many Republicans want a leader who won't try to do all the work himself and will let the other fellows do something. Besides, they accuse "Jim" of mis-taking at times his own policies for those of the Republican party, and of those of the Republican party, and of not being able, although party leader in the House, to forget his own likes and dislikes. Still another complaint emanating from the Republican con-servatives, is that Mann deals too leniently with the Progressive Repub-

Such a series of complaints would insure most anyone else loss of the leadership. But Mann is so pestiferously busy and so preternaturally active that they can't lose him. So he will probably be re-elected without the opposition coming to a head.

REVENUE CUTTER IS BACK FROM VOYAGE

Former Washington Official New Lockjaw Cure Was Ship's Navigator on 25,000-Mile Cruise.

The new revenue cutter, Unalga, with Meut. Frank L. Austin as navigating officer, and Capt. Richard O. Crisp in command, has completed a voyage of over 25,600 miles, taking her neariy around the world. The little vessels steamed into Port Townsend, Wash, early Easter morning, six months out of Arundel Cove in the Chesapeake. The voyage was completed on schedule desplite the fact that the Unalka was held at Port Said for six weeks in October and November, because of the outbreak of the Balkan war.

Lleuterant Austin, navigator, is known in Washington, having served for several years at headquarters here. The Unalga will remain at Port Townstant and the server is a sever. There have been no mental after affects. The Unalga will remain at Port Townsent taking on supplies and stores and cleaning dows, until May 1, when she will sail northward to Behring Sea for

The cruise from the Atlantic to the Pacific via Suez, was the Unalga's malden voyage. The vessel was launched at Newport News last summer.

Singularly enough, the fault they are finding with Mann in House Republican circles is, not that he isn't busy, but that he is too busy. It is agreed that there never was another man in the House who was quite so busy as Mann. He dezours whole tomes of Government statistics and seems to be as much thrilled over them as if they were novels.

Olympic, Rebuilt for Safety, Ready for Sea

BELFAST, March 24.-The 45,000-ton Olympic, which still has the distinction of being the largest steamship affoat left today for Southampton to get ready to sail for New York a week from Wednesday. For nearly four months the giant vessel has been in drydock, undergoing alterations designed to make her the "safest" ship in the world. At an expense of more then $1,500,000 the ves-sel has been fitted with an inner hull to make her, as far as engineering skill can, unsinkable.

to make her, as far as engineering skill can, unsinkable.

The original double bottom of the ship has been extended upward, to a point well above the water line, thus furnishing an interior skin of solid steel and forming a hull within a hull, so that the Olympia is now described as "Iwo ships in one." In the opinion of the engineering experts the Olympic could now pass safely through such an accident as befell her sister ship, the ill-fated Titanic, since the effect of running on a sunken reef or submerged iceberg would be merely to rip the outer hull.
